MARKET COMMENTARY

Global equity markets delivered positive returns, while fixed income markets posted negative returns. Stimulative measures by global central banks and optimism for the resumption of U.S.-China trade negotiations drove market sentiment.

We remain modestly underweight stocks relative to bonds, as equity valuations remain elevated against a backdrop of significant risks. At this stage of the current economic cycle, global stock markets appear susceptible to slower growth, waning earnings expectations, continued trade risks, and geopolitical unease. We expect equity and bond market volatility to remain elevated as concerns over monetary policy decisions and political risks unfold. We continue to expect only modest returns from bonds, as they remain expensive relative to history and the current low-yield environment offers a weak foundation for significant upside.

The dovish shift in monetary policy around the world and a broader easing of financial and liquidity conditions have reduced the near-term likelihood of a global recession. However, this current cycle of easing measures may leave global central banks ill-equipped to respond to a more pronounced downturn. While this step back from tightening policies may help to stabilize global growth, it will not, in our view, be sufficient to ignite a reacceleration in growth.

We have a balanced view on risk-taking within our portfolios as equity market valuations remain elevated amid continued volatility and political risks. We believe that our strategic investing approach and broad diversification add value over the long term and could help to mitigate downside risk.
